My nephew Logan was playing in the garden. He normally did not keep still, yet today when I saw him standing there and not moving at all, I knew something unexpected was happening. I tiptoed quietly towards him and also began to look where he seemed to be looking. Just then, near the gate, I noticed that he had seen a little puppy that was too cold to walk. It must have escaped from a house nearby.

1) Logan ...?...

- a shouted to his mom to look at the dog.
- b is usually a very active child.
- c did a lot of things his mom disliked.

2) The little puppy ...?...

- a hid outside the fence.
- b fascinated Logan greatly.
- c tried to run away.

My kids Jack and Madison usually get along with each other, but today I could hear them arguing even from the living room. Madison said it was the best film she had ever seen on the television for years. Jack said it was horrible. He said the story was poor and the acting appalling. Madison said he couldn't recognize a good film when he saw one. I stood up angrily "What film are you talking about?" I asked when I came into Jack's room. "The film shown last Saturday," said Madison. "The film shown last Sunday," said Jack. They looked at each other, and we all began laughing.

- a enjoyed the film she saw last Saturday.
- b said the story was very poor.
- c enjoyed the film less than Jack.
